Wish you had an extra pair of hands?

Looking after the children, keeping a house clean, cooking and juggling a job is enough to fill any parent's busy day. When you add in some time for yourself and a partner, the schedule looks even more daunting. Pink Spaghetti Home PA Service could help. It's a new business set up by two professional mums, Vicky Matthews and Caroline Gowing, and offers busy parents some extra help with those thankless tasks that can eat into precious family time.

"These days it is quite common for people to have help with their cleaning, ironing or gardening and so we thought we could take that concept one step further and offer a service that could really make parents lives a bit easier. Our service is very affordable and someone could just book us for 15 minutes to help lighten the load, or we could spend several hours and organise everything," explained Vicky. "No task is too big or small: From organising birthday parties and helping you find a better deal for your car insurance to picking up laundry and queuing at the post office, Pink Spaghetti will research, book, remind, shop, plan and suggest!"

Pink Spaghetti is on hand to give back to busy parents some much needed breathing space, and can give you back some time to spend doing the things that you really want.
